Grammar focus

We use the past tense of verbs to describe things that have happened earlier (in the past).

There is a rumour in dinosaur land.

The verb in this sentence is 'is'. This sentence is in the present tense, it is happening now.

How would you change this sentence into the past tense?

There ____ a rumour in dinosaur land.

Thursday

Grammar focus

Many past tense verbs end in 'ed', such as prowled, bellowed, squeaked, but not all of them, for example saw, taught and ran.

Can you change these verbs from present tense to past tense?

1. look

2. chew

3. leave

4. make

5. munch

6. find

Vocabulary

We are very lucky to have so many words in the English language because it means that, as writers, we have a lot of choice.

When we want to write or say something, there are usually many different ways that we can write it.

Look at these three words: cautiously, bravely, carefully.

Can you spot the odd one out?

Did you spot 'bravely' because it means something different?

Thursday

Vocabulary

Now try these:

1. cross furious delighted

2. huge flat enormous

3. protect keep safe show

4. anxious contented worried
